

CHAD SHELTON, tenor

Opera News praises tenor Chad Shelton for one of his trademark roles, claiming that his “Don José was the dramatic heart of this production; this was a performance that grew in complexity as he struggled to reconcile the forces of loyalty, lust and fate. Shelton owned the final scene, as his character descended into despair fueled by psychotic obsession. His bright tone amplified the intensity of the last gripping moments.” In the 2023-24 season, he returns to the Metropolitan Opera as Father Grenville in the company’s new production of Dead Man Walking and Pinkerton in Madama Butterfly as well as for its production of Carmen. He joins Opera Colorado as Erik in Der fliegende Holländer and returns to Herod in Salome with Des Moines Metro Opera. He also returns to the Utah Symphony for Beethoven’s Symphony No. 9.

Future seasons includes his debut at La Monnaie de Munt and returns to the Metropolitan Opera and Houston Grand Opera. Last season, he made an acclaimed role debut as Herod in Salome with Houston Grand Opera and his company debut with Santa Fe Opera in previous performances of Erik in Der fliegende Holländer in addition to returning to the Metropolitan Opera as Bob Boles in Peter Grimes and for its production of Norma.
